KING GEORGE AND PRINCE OF WALES ARRIVE IN PARIS

Holiday Declared In French Capital In Honor Of Their Coming

MET BY POINCARE

Cortege Passes Down Champs Elysees Amid Acclamations Of People

(French Wireless)

Lyons, November 28.—On Thursday afternoon King George V, with his two sons, the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, arrived in Paris at the Bois be Boulogne railway station where he was received by the President of the Republic, the Presidents of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies and the members of the Government.

Amid the acclamations of the population, the cortege went to the Palace of Foreign Affairs, which has been transformed into a Royal residence, passing along the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, the Avenue des Champs Elysees, and the Place and the Bridge de la Concorde. Troops from the front, who lined the route, were composed of detachments of General Debeney's army, which fought with the British army at Mont Kemmel, in the battle of the Aisne and in Flanders.

The President of the Republic and Madame Poincare on Thursday night will give a dinner at the Elysee in honor of the King and his two sons.

HIGH TRIBUTE IS PAID TO BRITISH AIR FORCE

Played Increasing Part In Victory Over Enemy In Every Theater

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, November 26.—The Air Council has paid a high tribute to the valor and the devotion to duty of the Air Force during the war. It says that in every theater of war, by sea and land, the assistance of the Air Force has been a factor of ever-increasing importance in the operations of the navy and army.

The Home Defense squadrons, under very difficult and dangerous conditions, successfully met the menace of the enemy's air attacks on civilians. The work of the Independent Air Force during recent months powerfully contributed to the disintegration of the enemy's capacity to resist.

Celebration In Peking Of Victory Most Brilliant Function In China's History

Allied Troops Reviewed By President Hsu Shih-Chang In Famous Courtyard Of Tai Ho-Tien

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, November 28.—The official celebration of the conclusion of peace today was the most brilliant function of its kind in the history of China. The attendance was enormous and the setting was excellent. The Allied troops stood at ease at 11 o'clock in the great courtyard of the Tai Ho Tien facing the footway leading to the Palace, which is one of the finest examples of Chinese architecture. In the brilliant sunshine it appeared at its best, with its white palisades tier above tier, thronged with guests. Brilliant uniforms of various nations and a generous display of Allied flags lent additional brightness to the scene, enhancing the general effect.

The troops were very smart, especially the American Marines and the Indians, who never moved during the interval while awaiting the arrival of the President, while their dispositions showed regard for the colors of their uniforms and the height of the men. The interval ended by the command "present arms," the bands struck up and the President, followed by the members of the Diplomatic Corps and Cabinet Ministers, passed through the troops and entered the Tai Ho Tien. Thereupon the Allied flags marched to the terrace in front of the terrace on which the President emerged and read the following address:

President Hsu's Address

"This is a day just after victory, a day of celebration thereof, which I, the President, am delighted to attend. Weapons have now been laid aside and peace reigns again. Violence has been defeated and right has been justified, and a new glorious page has been written in the history of the war. Allied soldiers as well as Chinese join me in rejoicing, for we are of one heart and principle. There are sayings in Europe such as 'Might cannot conquer right,'-and 'Pride comes before a fall.' Compare these with some Chinese maxims, such as 'Soldiers fighting for right are strong, while those fighting for might are weak,' also 'One striving to do right gains assistance while the one doing wrong gets the least aid,' etc.

"Both foreign and Chinese histories show the truth of these maxims. When man strives with man there is individual competition, when nation strives with nation there is national rivalry, but right should always be the deciding factor. If one man attempts to trample upon right the nations must oppose him. Therefore the Allies supporting right utilised the whole of their resources, but they knew that right must triumph and theirs be the ultimate victory. We, animated by the same spirit, joined the Allied cause. Now right has triumphed and hereafter right will shine with the brilliance of celestial bodies and the merit of the Allies shall be everlasting. Their victory is the greatest in history. The Allied and Chinese soldiers now standing in the same enclosure are friends together, and I earnestly hope that we shall never forget this memorable occasion and that we shall always observe the principle of the victory which we are celebrating here and that the nations of the world will maintain peace forever."

The troops then marched out and rockets were fired, while aeroplanes, circling overhead, dropped congratulatory messages. The Allied Legation Guards and a picked battalion of Chinese troops marched through the Legation Quarter while the remainder of the Chinese troops marched through the Western City past General Tuan Chi-jui's residence.

This evening there will be a celebration in the Central Park.

WOMAN REVOLUTIONIST ARRIVES IN VLADIVOSTOK

Mme. Breschskovskaia, 'Grandmother Of The Revolution' On Way To America

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, November 28.—Madame Maria Breschskovskaia, known as grandmother of the revolution, arrived here this morning en route to America. Interviewed this evening, she stated that she had been commissioned by the congress of members of the Constituent Assembly at Ufa to proceed to America and lecture there on the fatal effects of Bolshevism in Russia and to explain to the American people what were the political forces and groups now operating in Russia and their respective aims and hopes. Her interpretation, she said, would tend to draw closer the Slavonic and English speaking races.

The arrival of Madame Breschkovskaia in Vladivostok excited the greatest interest among leading public and political men.

SIXTEEN NEW VESSELS COMPLETED IN WEEK

Deadweight Tonnage Of 94,856 Is Turned Over To American Shipping Board

(American Wireless To Reuter)

Washington, November 28.—(Received at French Wireless Station).—Sixteen vessels totaling 94,856 deadweight tons were completed and delivered to the Shipping Board by American shipyards in the week ending November 22. All but three were of steel.

CANTON DELEGATES ASK AMERICAN RECOGNITION

Memorandum Submitted To Senate Giving Reasons For South's Status As Belligerent

(American Wireless To Reuter)

Washington, November 28.—(Received at French Wireless Station).—The representatives of the South China government at Canton filed today with Senator Hitchcock, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, a memorandum setting forth the claims of the Canton regime for recognition as a belligerent. The memorandum states that the Canton republican government controls the Chinese navy and standing army of 200,000. It is unable to block the ports of the Peking Government only because of the control by the Powers of the ports of entry. It asserts that the Canton authorities represent two-fifths of the Chinese population and the present authorities in Peking are usurpers.

GOVERNMENT TO RETAIN FOREIGN TRADE CONTROL

Board To Supervise American Imports And Exports As Shipping Measure

(American Wireless To Reuter)

Washington, November 28.—(Received at French Wireless Station).—Chairman Vance McCormick of the War Trade Board announced today that the board will continue to control imports and exports for an indefinite period, so as to guarantee shipping and supplies for American troops overseas and relief for the needy nations of Europe. He said that when the state of international trade showed that any restrictions of the board were in conflict with this policy they would be quickly removed.

'B' COMPANY MEMBERS REFUSE TO APOLOGISE

Eight Men, Who Faced Court Of Inquiry, Called Before Commandant

The situation in "B" Company, British, S.V.C., took another turn yesterday when, called before the Commandant following the report of the court of inquiry, non-commissioned officers of the company refused to apologise for their stand or to make expressions of loyalty to the captain.

The trouble, as reported at the time in THE CHINA PRESS, arose from the transfer to the company of a commissioned officer without calling for the sentiments of the men. A large part of the unit subsequently absented themselves from drill and the court of inquiry followed.

Yesterday eight of the men, principally non-commissioned officers, were called to the Town Hall headquarters before the Commandant, Major Trueman, who criticised their stand and suggested that the best way to end the matter, would be for each to apologise and express his loyalty to the company's captain. Each of the men in turn either declined to promise or flatly refused, following which they were dismissed. Thus the matter is again in abeyance.

Ellis Ezra To Appeal From Meifoo Decision

Will Take Matter, Denied By Full Court, To Privy Council

Mr. Ellis Ezra, whose appeal from the decision fining him $2,000 in the Meifoo case was denied by the British Full Court recently, stated yesterday that he will again appeal the matter, this time to the Privy Council in London. Mr. Ezra stated that the matter was now in the hands of his attorneys.

German Convicted Of Larceny Of $300

Sentenced To Six Months In Prison For Robbing Compatriot

Christian Haine, German, residing at 21 Miller Road, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment yesterday in the Mixed Court for the larceny of $300 from his neighbor, one Wolter of 24 Miller Road. The accused pleaded guilty. Haine and the complainant have been having their meals at the same boarding house and a few days ago Haine called on Wolter in the latter's room. Haine admitted having taken $300 from the trousers pocket of Wolter and spent the money in purchasing 1,000 roubles, paying his boarding house bill and having a good time

The German Imperial Councillor, Schulze, committed suicide on seeing the reception accorded to the French, whom Karolyi, President of the Hungarian Republic, officially greeted.

DOVER BARELY ESCAPED COMPLETE DESTRUCTION

Magazine Of Burning Monitor In Harbor Just Saved From Exploding

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, November 26.—The latest batch of interesting wartime happenings now released for publication contains a story of how Dover narrowly missed being blotted out just prior to the last Belgian offensive.

The harbor was packed with war vessels of all descriptions including four monitors that were about to start out for the Belgian coast to cooperate with the land offensive. Suddenly an explosion shook the town and it was soon discovered that the monitor Glatten was furiously ablaze in the harbor. It is stated that Admiral Keyes went on board the Glatten and, realising that a catastrophe would result if the Glatten's magazines exploded with so many ammunition ships in proximity, ordered air raid sirens to be blown in order to clear the streets. Orders were also given to sink the Glatten. The destroyer Broke succeeded in hitting, with three torpedoes, that part of the Glatten away from the magazine and in sinking her, thus saving Dover.

COMMERCIAL AVIATION PROJECT IS SUBMITTED

Scheme For Regulation By Allied Powers Drawn Up In France

(French Wireless)

Lyons, November 28.—The Inter-Ministerial Commission on Civil Aeronautics, presided over by M. D'Audigny, Deputy of the Sarthe, has worked out a scheme for the regulation of aerial navigation with a view to reaching an accord between France, her Allies and associated countries with regard to the problems concerning the commercial utilisation of commercial aviation. This project has been submitted to M. Clemenceau, the President of the Council.

FOCH IN STRASBURG

(French Wireless)

Lyons, November 28.—The past four days will always be remembered by the inhabitants of Strasburg and by all the French who were present. After the outburst of joy which was caused by the entry of General Gouraud and the triumphal review which passed on the following day before Marshal Petain, the enthusiasm was increased today by the entry of Marshal Foch, who was accompanied by General de Castelnau.

The troops of occupation passed in review before the Generalissimo of the Allied armies and then marched through the streets, Marshal Foch taking his place at their head on horseback, resulting in truly marvelous manifestations of enthusiasm.

King Albert In Mons

A message from Brussels states that King Albert, accompanied by the Heir Apparent, on Thursday made a solemn entry into the town of Mons. An immense crowd acclaimed their sovereign along the whole route. The Canadian troops lined the streets through which the royal procession passed.

A reception was held at the Town Hall, where the Burgomaster, M. Lescart, welcomed King Albert in moving terms. At the end of the ceremony the King appeared on the balcony of the Town Hall and was received with the enthusiastic ovations of thousands and thousands of people.

EXTRADITION OF KAISER DEMANDED BY FRANCE

Should Face Responsibility For Barbarities Of War Like Common Criminal

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, November 27.—The demand in France for the extradition of the ex-Kaiser is growing. Professor Berthelemy, the eminent authority on law, states that the ex-Kaiser can be extradited owing to his responsibilities for the war, which resulted in shameless barbarism and useless vandalism. Therefore he must be considered a common criminal.

FOREIGNER FOUND GUILTY OF BIG ROUBLE FORGERY

Michael Doll To Be Sentenced Today For Complicity In Rls. 591,000 Fraud

Michael Doll, charged with the forgery of 14,784 documents purporting to be rouble notes to an aggregate value of over Rls. 591,000, was found guilty by a jury in the British Supreme Court yesterday. Sentence will be served today, the question being raised yesterday whether the prisoner should be sentenced for a felony—for which he would be liable to five years' imprisonment—or for a misdemeanor—for which he is liable to two years' hard labor.

The accused in the witness box denied all connection with the forgeries. He said that he had been previously employed here in the Customs and by the China Merchants' but lately had been out of employment and in need of funds. He declared that a Chinese named Zeng had offered him a position with an insurance company and that he had visited the house on Kuling Road, where he was arrested, in connection with this offer. He said that he did not know any rouble notes were being printed there and thought that the printing which was being done was in connection with the insurance company. Two Chinese and two foreign witnesses were called for the defense and the judge, Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, then addressed the jury, impressing upon them that the question was whether or not Doll was a party to the fraud which was being carried on by the Chinese. The court stated that there seemed little doubt that the Chinese knew what they were doing.

The jury was out about ten minutes, bringing in a verdict of guilty with the rider "we are not convinced that he was alone or the principal in organising the scheme."

In reply to a question by the judge the foreman of the jury stated that they were of opinion the Chinese were concerned in the affair as well. Mr. H. P. Wilkinson, Crown Advocate, said that the legal authorities were looking for the man named Zeng but had decided not to prosecute the other Chinese, Dee Doh-foo, the man Doll was charged with procuring to commit the forgeries. Sir Havilland stated that after what had transpired in court in his opinion this question should be reconsidered.

In addressing the prisoner the judge emphasised the seriousness of the crime, pointing out that he was not merely attempting to put money into his own pocket but was jeopardising the position of other people who, if the notes had gone into circulation, might have been liable to prosecution for his misdeed. After some argument as to the sentence court was adjourned.

Reconstruction Of Cabinet Is Proceeding In Peking

Much Political Wire-Pulling Results, With Tsao Ju-lin Trying To Keep His Hand In

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, November 26.—During the past few days there has been a good deal of political maneuvering in connection with the reconstruction of the Cabinet. The first point to be borne in mind is that Mr. Tsao Ju-lin wanted to keep the post of Minister of Finance until the very last moment, as there were certain important loans pending with Japanese lenders the pickings from which, to a Croesus like Mr. Tsao, should not seem much, but which to an ordinary man, and Mr. Tsao is in some respects an ordinary man, are certainly equivalent to a very substantial life annuity.

Mr. Tsao has therefore been wire-pulling very shrewdly to keep himself in the Ministry of Finance for a short time longer. To this end he reminded certain cliques in the two Houses that the Acting Prime Minister, Mr. Chien Neng-hsun, was responsible some time ago, in his capacity of Minister of the Interior, for the sale of ten million dollars' worth of timber in the neighborhood of the Eastern Tombs. The result of this gentle reminder was that a number of M. P's. signed a memorial to the President asking that Mr. Chien's name might not be placed before Parliament in nomination for the post of Prime Minister.

This memorial had already some thirty signatures, when it was suddenly dropped, and it is not now likely to be presented. The reason is partly a change of attitude on the part of the Japanese authorities, who threaten to interfere actively instead of putting the telescope to the blind eye when improper loan negotiations are set afoot, a change which means that whether Mr. Tsao is Minister of Finance or not, there are to be practically no loan pickings worth thinking about; so Mr. Tsao's friends in Parliament have dropped the idea of impeding the reconstruction of the Cabinet, and it is to go forward.

That is one side of the matter. Another side turns on the relations between Cabinet and Parliament on the one hand, and between Parliament and the tuchuns on the other. There has been some anxiety on the side of Parliament lest it should be dismissed at an early date as a sacrifice to Mr. Hsu Shih-chang's pacific activities and his desire to reach an accommodation with the South. Hence Parliament has been very anxious to placate the tuchuns in every possible way. On the other hand, the tuchuns did not want to see the Cabinet reconstructed to their disadvantage, and so they have been keeping a very close eye on all Cabinet reconstruction proposals. In many senses the Anfu Club represents the tuchuns. But the tuchuns are not entirely of a single mind about anything, and General Chang Tso-lin, Tuchun of Fengtien, has feared that other influences might outweigh his own. So, when the names of Mr. Chang Shou-lin and Mr. Kung Hsin-chan were brought forward as suggestions for the Ministry of Finance, the Fengtien M.P.'s. gave signs of very strong opposition to the latter, it being argued that if he were appointed there would be danger of the Anfu Club becoming the Anhui Club, that is to say, of the Cabinet being dominated by the Anhui party. On the other hand, the President and founder of the Anfu Club, Mr. Wang Yi-tang, had a personal dislike for Mr. Chang Shou-lin.

The appointment of a Minister of Finance therefore turns on what sort of an understanding can be reached between the parliamentary leaders and the tuchuns. If the tuchuns can be brought to a single mind, accepting Mr. Kung Hsin-chan, then undoubtedly Parliament will approve the nomination of Mr. Kung. This approval will not take place for some days, as parliamentary business is practically suspended until after the official celebrations are over.

In the meantime, it is being asked why the tuchuns are remaining in Peking in such numbers. First of all they came in ones and twos and a few ones and twos departed. Then they stayed on here practically in a body, the excuse given being that they wanted to celebrate General Tsao K'un's birthday. That celebration took place on Sunday, and still the tuchuns stay, now on the ground that they desire to be present at the review on Thursday. It is wondered whether after that they will still find excuses for staying. It is considered here to be not without significance that General Ni Shih-chung has formed a club, called the Tuchuns' Club of 1918, which organises the tuchuns into a compact body, and General Tsao K'un has been appointed "Elder Brother," or president, unanimously. What does this mean? Is it a Chinese Eighty Club merely?

Y.W.C.A. Campaign Making Good Progress

Over $2,000 Already Secured; Hope To Have Full Amount In Few Days

Such good progress is reported in the Young Women's Christian Association's campaign for funds that it is hoped to bring the campaign to a close before the expiration of the two weeks originally planned for its duration.

Leaders of the various teams on last Wednesday reported the collection of over $2,000 and all were optimistic that the full $6,500 needed will be secured by the middle of next week. The campaign opened on November 22.

Chinese, British and American women compose the teams which are doing the work and it was an interesting fact that two Chinese teams, led by Mrs. Mei and Mrs. D. Y. Lin, were ahead when the last report was made. The school children's teams, composed of both foreign and Chinese students, are also getting good results.

The campaign is being conducted on the card index system, a duplicate card being issued to each worker in order that prospective contributors may not be called on more than once.

PAY BY CHECK

Paying by check is a simple, easy method of keeping track of every expenditure made from day to day.

The cancelled checks as returned to you each month by this bank are RECEIPTS, the stubs in your checkbook an accurate ACCOUNT of every dollar spent.

Even months from now you can go back to your checkbook and know at a glance to whom and for what you've paid out money.

If you pay cash there's always a chance of losing the money—in which case it's a dead loss. If you lose a check it's worthless to the finder—or to make doubly sure you can easily order payment on it stopped.

Adopt the pay-by-check system in meeting personal and household bills. Saves time, trouble, worry and money for you.

SOCIALISM TO BE FEARED

Administration Is Criticised For Some Of Its Policies By Western Banker

Boston, October 18.—At the meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers in the Hotel Copley-Plaza tonight one of the principal speakers was B. F. Harris, President of the First National Bank of Champaign, Ill. In the course of his address Mr. Harris, whose subject was "Back to First Principles and New Ideals," said:

"Civilisation everywhere today faces two foes—one, the iron might of autocracy, and the other, the Bolsheviki, and sometimes under the teachings of misguided and sentimental university professors. We have thought and worked and lived as an aggregation of individuals, but not as a nation. And now, suddenly, we are undertaking the greatest work any nation ever undertook, and necessarily, with all its international relationships and responsibilities.

"'Tis mortifying but well that we refresh our minds, not alone to recall how we came to our present pass but more especially to determine if we propose, by the same mistaken methods, to daily with such dire results as may come with the dawn of peace and its unplanned days. We were so long saturated with the deadly, stupefying, devitalising, 'watchful waiting', pacific procedure—aggravated and compounded from time to time to our dishonor and inestimable cost—that we still seem under the spell.

"Some leaders of the party in power are quite conscious that most of those within and without its membership, differing from it in matters of procedure, hesitate to have their patriotism questioned if they protest, and have taken great advantage of this fact. The reaction from this is repressing and weakening on the opposition, and of great disadvantage and danger both to the best prosecution of the war and the general interest. Thus the dominant leaders are 'digging in' constantly on a growing front, not alone in old school methods and partisan purposes, but in State socialism and political possession of industry. A false notion of patriotism must not prevent the vigorous and restorative expression of constructive conviction and criticism that is as necessary for the safety of the republic in war as in peace.

"Almost daily we hear the superficial, misleading phrase, 'make the world safe for democracy.' We cannot make the world safe for democracy, nor can we make the world safe through democracy. It is a question of a type of democratic republic safe for, and under a leadership consecrated to, the people.

"Here—where, in letter as in spirit, we are getting away from the principles that made a nation safe for the first time in history, and helped make the world safer, until we began the modification of this republic—by adding elements both of socialism and autocracy.

"It has taken war to make us economic, conserving, less selfish, more human—and to wipe out most of our wasteful, care-free and paralysing habits of peace. Many of these forced habits of war must live through and become part and parcel of our national life, if we are to reach our goal.

"The foundation of our civilisation, of our republic, lies in the stimulation and freedom of self-initiative—the fullest development of the individual. That is the philosophy of peace; German Kultur is based on the submergence of the individual in the State to the ultimate maximum efficiency and power of the State. This is the philosophy of domination and aggression—it is the philosophy of war.

"The largest national issue that is forming today is whether this Government is going to go further and further into State socialism as Germany did and is doing—or whether individualism with fewer restrictions on business, and those largely of Federal nature, will prevail.

"The issue—whether the genius of American individual enterprise is to be set free again, but with due regard for the opportunity and welfare of all the people. The responsibility to save and guide this republic rests on the spiritually and intellectually, the humanly and practically minded men and women who have brotherly love, faith, and courage plus, not in themselves more than in the people rightly led and advised.

"Government cannot successfully assume functions of home, school and church. Even as Lincoln said he thought boards and commissions are contrivances to cheat the Government, so Government may defeat its own purpose and so-called Government ownership is only camouflage for political ownership of industry and in that phase of socialistic democracy which assumes that Government should not mind its own business—it only adds another 'mock' to what we mistakenly call democracy.

"One cannot help but feel that much of our headlong and apparently uncalled-for governmental control was a result of a unwillingness of the Administration to chance the alienation of labor and to face it frankly and squarely, and with as little ceremony and delay as it did capital and conscription. We indorse the general procedure, but not the delay in getting all of us except labor on a war basis and therein, and in the subterfuge lies my thesis and the origin of most of what menaces us.

"By the same token and in the same hands, what is now Government control in time of war would become political possession or so-called Government ownership in time of peace, with a great political payroll of millions of men and all the resulting inefficiency, increased cost, and general disorganisation.

"We must work toward the Australian system, where labor controversies are handed over to a special court. The sanction of Government under one or another name for the court will be granted eventually. The community will approve and industrial controversy will become as justiciable as property controversy and systematic justice thereby be extended. The labor or production problem belongs to all of us, but has too long been treated on a day-to-day, hand-to-mouth basis. After the war re-employment and unemployment problems will overpower us unless we plan wisely and well now—or unless the party in power is to go the rest of the route and put us all on the payroll.

"The nation's goal is not private gain but social well-being, national strength, and eternal life. My neighbor's prosperity is my security. The social, economic, and spiritual well-being of all—hand and brain workers alike, to the last man, woman and child—concerns all of us intimately."

AUSTRIA TRICKED UKRAINIA

Made Scrap Of Paper Of Secret Treaty To Obtain Poles' Support

How the Austro-Hungarian Government made a scrap of paper out of a treaty negotiated with the Ukraine last Winter is described as follows in the Volksstimme of Frankfort in its issue of August 29:

"At the conclusion of the first Brest-Litovsk peace between the Central Powers and the Ukraine, Austria, as is known, entered into a secret treaty with the Ukraine, in which it pledged itself to divide Galicia and to give Eastern Galicia Ukrainian autonomy. This concession apparently seemed necessary at that time in order to obtain the conclusion of peace with the Ukraine. Since then internal conditions in Austria have made it necessary to take the wishes of the Poles into special consideration, and consequently Austria has declared its secret treaty with the Ukraine to be null and void. How this was accomplished is thus described in Polish and Ukrainian newspapers:

"The Imperial and Royal Ambassador at Kief, Count Forgach, informed Hetman Sheropadsky that the imperial and Royal Government no longer recognised the secret treaty as binding. Skoropadsky protested and lamented the fact that the Ukraine did not have an army with which to enforce Austria's observance of the treaty. Forgach then went to Foreign Minister Doroschenko and informed him that the Hetman had agreed to the abrogation of the treaty. Doroschenko replied, exactly like Skoropadsky, that if the Ukraine only had an army it would enforce the observance of the treaty. Whereupon Count Forgach reported to Vienna that the Ukrainian Government renounced the treaty.'

"This is the way the Poles were won over to vote for the provisional budget. But in the future the Austrian policy will be handicapped by the ill will the Ukrainians will hold toward it."

RELIEF FROM BANDITS IS PROMISED SHENSI

Fengtien Troops, Well Disciplined Men, On Way To Clear Out Brigands

China Press Correspondence

Chengchow, Honan Province, Nov. 27.—This important railway junction is at present full of Chinese troops, and more are arriving steadily every day. These troops are mostly from Fengtien, and are under the direct command of General Hsu Lan-chow, a former Divisional Commander in Manchuria. It is well known that the Central Government at Peking has at last decided to wage a war of extermination against the thousands of armed bandits now terrorising the province of Shensi, and General Hsu will personally lead his army into Shensi via Tungkwan, with the object of clearing the high road to Sianfu, and establishing communications with that important city.

For several months past, Sianfu has been practically in a state of siege, and Tuchun Chen Shu-fan has been, and is, in a very precarious situation. All the country to the North, South, and West of the capital is entirely overrun with robbers, and recently large bodies of mounted bandits have been raiding the towns and villages situated along the main road to the East, so that at times Sianfu is completely isolated, as even the telegraph wires are cut, and the overland postal service suspended for the time being.

All civilian traffic between Tungkwan and Sianfu has ceased, as it is a practical impossibility for a Chinese to travel even two or three li along the road without being robbed and stripped of everything he has. All foreign trade with the province of Shensi came to a standstill some months ago, and even the progressive and enterprising tobacco company has long since withdrawn entirely from Sianfu, and recalled its foreign representative from that point. Even for foreign travelers it is impossible to proceed to Sianfu, as they would never be allowed to pass Tungkwan, and as a matter of fact the authorities at Peking will not now issue passports for Shensi province, and the southern route to Sianfu, via Tungkwan, has been officially closed to foreigners.

General Hsu's expeditionary force will consist of thirty to forty thousand men, and already some 10,000 have gone on ahead to Tungkwan. Judging from the appearance and equipment of the troops now in Chengchow, these men are the pick of the Fengtien troops, and to one who is used to the disorderly and riotous behavior of the average Chinese soldiery, their discipline and workmanlike appearance are really surprising. General Hsu Lan-chow has the reputation for being a strict disciplinarian, and generally his soldiers have acted in an orderly and peaceful manner. Proclamations are posted all over Chengchow city, exhorting the people to remain tranquil, and stating that any soldier caught looting or extorting goods from the tradespeople without proper payment, will be instantly shot.

LANCASTRIAN SOCIETY HAS VICTORY BANQUET

Over 300 Members And Friends Gather At Astor House For Dinner And Dance

Over three hundred—the largest attendance for a dinner in the history of the Society—sat down to the banquet given by the Association of Lancastrians for members and friends in the Astor House ballroom last evening in celebration of the Allied victory.

Mr. W. N. C. Allen, president of the Association, presided at the dinner and acted as toastmaster. Following the dinner and after the health of the King had been drunk, Mr. Allen read a telegram, transmitted by Sir Everard Fraser, in reply to the message of congratulation sent by the society following the signing of the armistice. There was also a telegram from Sir Douglas Haig. Sir Everard Fraser then spoke briefly and a most interesting talk on his war experiences was then given by Major Aspland, of the Medical branch of the service, who was captured by the Austrians in Servia.

Following the dinner there was dancing, in the finely decorated ballroom until a late hour.

Judgment Against German Brewery

Judgment was given in the Mixed Court yesterday against the Union Brauerei Co., the German brewery, in favor of F. Haehuke, Norwegian, for Tls. 166,000 to be paid within one day. The plaintiff stated in the petition that since 1913 he had owned 3,050 shares out of 4,000 in the brewery, whose capital was $400,000. He prayed that the company be dissolved and that he be appointed liquidator. The plaintiff was represented by Mr. J. Em. Lemiere.

FLEET AT DURAZZO LED BY AMERICANS

Our Submarine Chasers Found And Marked With Flags Channel Through Mine Field

WORKED IN A HEAVY SEA

Then, In Midst Of Battle, Fought And Helped To Sink Two U-Boats

An Italian Sea Base in the Lower Adriatic, October 9. (Associated Press).—For the first time in the history of the world, American ships have fought in the Adriatic, participating in the attack upon and destruction of the greatest of Austrian naval bases, Durazzo, founded by the inhabitants of the Island of Corfu over 2,000 years before the discovery of America. The whole Italian fleet took part in the attack aided by American submarine chasers and French and British destroyers.

The expedition started from an Adriatic port at 8 o'clock in the morning and immediately divided into two groups. The larger units sailed northward to take up positions between Cattaro, where the bulk of the Austrian fleet lay, and Durazzo, for the purpose of nipping in the bud any attempt at interference. The remainder of the fleet headed straight for Durazzo. The American chasers and Allied destroyers went ahead in fan-shaped formation on the lookout for submarines, while the airplanes which accompanied the expedition all the way kept a sharp watch from the air.

At 11 o'clock the Albanian hills were sighted, and shortly afterward the white houses at Durazzo hove in sight. Half an hour later the fleet was on the edge of the Austrian mine field. A highly dangerous task was now intrusted to the American submarine chasers, namely, to steam ahead and explore and mark safe passages for the larger craft, with flags fixed on small floats. The work was rendered all the more perilous by the heavy sea running.

Throughout the whole operation, fearlessly picking their way between sunken mines, the small American vessels kept steadily on their way until they had crossed the whole of the danger zone. Then the remainder of the fleet entered the mine field, following in the track of the American chasers.

At this point the Austrian coast batteries opened fire and great spurts of water were caused by the striking shells. The projectiles kept creeping nearer and nearer the American craft, which were unable to manœuver owing to the mines. The men stood the test splendidly and aroused great admiration by their cool and cheerful bearing as they stood at their guns awaiting the order to fire. The order was given to increase speed and the fleet emerged from the mine field unscathed. It immediately feel into battle formation and began to bombard the land defenses.

The American chasers and Allied destroyers were ordered to proceed straight into Durazzo harbor and attack two large and three smaller steamers, two destroyers, one torpedo boat, a number of submarines, and a quantity of small craft lying within the harbor. One of the large steamers immediately made off to the north, but as it was recognised as a hospital ship it was allowed to proceed. The other steamers were quickly sunk. The torpedo boat, hit early in action was run ashore, while the two destroyers tried to slink off, hugging the coast line. The American submarine chasers and British destroyers headed them off and sent both to the bottom after a short but lively action.

The fire of the Austrian batteries already was slackening when two enemy submarines appeared on the surface and fired two torpedoes, one of which hit a British destroyer without sinking her. This was just what the American had been awaiting and they swooped down on the submarines before these could do any more mischief and sank them both with superb gunnery.

By 12:30 o'clock all the shore batteries had been reduced to silence and the whole town was one immense blaze. Signals were sent to the fleet, which had vainly waited two hours for the Austrians to come off Cattaro, that the action was over. Treading their way again through the narrow passage in the mine-field marked by the American submarine chasers, the whole fleet steamed homeward. Behind, the great Austrian sea base was nothing but a heap of smoking ruins, its port a cemetery of sunken ships.

Here And There In The S.O.S.

(From The Stars And Stripes, Oct. 4)

Yankee camouflage artists are getting so blooming clever with their trick foliage and fadeaway effects that they are fooling the animals as well as the Huns. R.R. and C., or the department of Rents, Requisitions and Claims, at S.O.S. headquarters has just received a claim for 2,000 francs from a French woman for the loss of two cows which, she alleges, died from eating camouflaged grass draped around a pillbox which the Yankee had set up in the back meadow lot on her farm behind the British front.

There is a colored labor outfit in the S.O.S. engaged in quarry work near a base port. A few weeks ago, in the course of opening up some new ground, they discovered an old Roman burying ground with many skeletons, coins and relics. The find made quite an impression on the minds of the finders, and there were many speculations as to whether the shades of the departed legionaries still hover around in the vicinity of their last resting place. The general opinion was that a man ought to be on his guard when out late at night.

About that time the sum of 60 francs disappeared from the counter of a nearby Y.M.C.A. hut. The captain of this outfit doesn't know a great deal about class-room psychology, but he has learned a lot about it in the field. He called his outfit together one night in the Y hut and told them of the disappearance of the money. Then he outlined the history and characteristics of the old Romans.

"Boys," he said, "there was one thing a Roman hated worse than anything else, and that was a thief. If the ghosts of those old fellows who were buried up there on the hill should learn that somebody in this outfit had 60 stolen francs in his pocket, I don't know just what would happen. I'm going to put my hat here on the table and turn out the lights. The guilty man will know what to do."

There was quite a shuffling of feet and milling around in the hut, and then all was quiet. When the captain turned on the lights again and looked in the hat he found not only the 60 francs, but 300 more, and a few odd centimes for good measure.

Army correspondence, with its official circumlocutions and endless indorsements, is not always such dry and tedious reading as the letter concerning the loss of "1 knife, carving," which, when it reached its fifty-ninth indorsement, a disgusted officer threw into the waste basket. Occasionally it becomes fairly human, as witness the following indorsement which a major in the S.O.S. tacked on to an application for a commission:

"1. Sergt. Blank isn't much good. He knows more about Army Regulations and General Orders than anybody, which indicates a wasted life. He is a good drill master, which doesn't fit this organization just now. He is inclined to be sober, not appreciating that 'Man, being reasonable, must get drunk. The best of life's but intoxication.' He has spent his youth in pursuits other than railroading, which indicates an illogical intellect. He attends to his business so closely that I am always suspicious of him.

"2. Anybody that knows how can perform his present duties, whether the rank be less, equal to or greater than his.

"3. In addition, Sergt. Blank is anxious to get to the Front (with a capital F), and I recommend him for the Pioneers."

One of the stories that you can pry out of the Signal Corps boys if you're right smart about it, and one which, when forced to they tell with not a little glee, is how they fixed up the telephone and telegraph connection for General Pershing's private car when the General was on his tour of the S.O.S. along in the summer.

The force at Base No. 7 got the word at 7:30 p.m. one night that the car would pull into the yards the following morning, and that a special telegraph-telephone line was to be connected up to it. They turned out in the dark, and worked like Trojans, but just as they had everything fixed up and were ready to hit the old blankets, conscious of a good job well done and no reveille to worry about as a reward, along came a fire and put the whole arrangement on the kibosh.

Nothing daunted, they set to work all over again and when the job was completed they checked up and found that it had taken only 45 minutes' extra work to clear away the old tackle and fix the connections up as good as new. Immediately the General's car pulled in, the war bulletins were being ticked off and handed to him in a steady stream of tape, and the 'phone central on the car was talking with central at Base No. 7 within exactly three minutes.

There is a scheme on foot to have flashed on the moving picture screen of every Y hut in the S.O.S. that boasts a screen a table of comparative figures about the discharge of freight from the several base ports. These figures will appear on a set night every week, or as near to the set night as possible. They will be in the nature of a "Standing of the Clubs." The husky stevedore lads will at last have a little contest on which to wager as an antidote to the war wearying monotony of "Come, big Dick," and "Ah, baby! Pair o' boxcyahs!"

September 22 was a red letter day in the Army lives of the Railroad Engineers stationed around a certain base, for on that date the first All-American trains set out from there for the front.

The word "All-American" is used advisedly, for the trains were made up in our own yards, of our own cars, engines and all, and manned throughout by our own crews. They were all American but the rails and scenery.

Incidentally, the Railroad Engineers at Base No.—(the same place the first All-American special started from by the way) would have you know that the dear old base now boasts some 200 miles of track. This, as they will tell you without your asking, makes it one of the biggest, if not the biggest, railroad yard inaugurated anywhere on earth. To the great discomfiture of their brother railroad workers further up the line at X, they point out that X is a mere piker, being unable to count only a measly 90 miles of trackage around the entire project.

EDITORS HEAR NORTHCLIFFE

Publisher, Host At Luncheon, Tells Of The 'Miracle' In America

London, October 11.—Entertaining a party of American editors at luncheon at the Times offices on Thursday, Lord Northcliffe, toasting the American visitors, said:

"In America last year we wondered at the strange phenomenon of the rising young men of that nation, many resident a thousand miles from the sea, being drawn by some mysterious instinct to leave their prosperous careers to come across the Atlantic. Their crusade was one of the great miracles of the world.

"Public opinion had become unanimous in America, not because they had anything to get out of the war, but because of the overwhelming instinct to rise to the cause of justice.

"We never use the word 'foreigner' in regard to Americans in this country," Lord Northcliffe added. "We regard you as ourselves."

Dr. Edward J. Wheeler of New York replied to the toast, and F. P. Glass of Birmingham, Ala., a member of a second party of editors, describing his voyage across the Atlantic, said:

"The fear among the 1,800 American troops aboard our ship was that the war might be finished before they arrived in France."

Shanghai College Wins

Shanghai College defeated the Aurora University football team in a well contested match played on the former's grounds Thursday afternoon, the score being 4 to 2.

The visiting team lost the toss and the Shanghai players had the advantage of the wind during the first half but did not play a very aggressive game. The score was 2 to 1 at the end of the period. With the wind against them in the next half Shanghai College played a more determined game scoring two more goals while Aurora made one more. On the whole the teams were evenly matched, with the Aurora aggregation showing possibly better team work. Mr. Kelhofer refereed the game.

Shanghai College expects to play a St. Xavier's College team this afternoon.

Hockey Match Today

Hockey followers will have opportunity to watch a match this afternoon at Hongkew recreation ground where the Sikhs will meet the Portuguese Co., S.V.C., team in a friendly game at 3 o'clock.

NOTICE

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL much regret that for the first time for a hundred years war conditions prevent many of their products being shipped to China. They much appreciate the letters they are receiving, and in reply would state that it is fully recognised here that under the circumstances of life in China the absence of English delicacies and foods is a very real hardship.

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL will take care that not a day shall be lost in forwarding supplies when a return to more normal conditions permits. In the meantime they trust that those who have been accustomed to rely on their products will be good enough to accept this explanation.

The League Of Nations Idea In History

WE are in receipt of a pamphlet written by Prof. A. F. Pollard and issued by the Oxford University Press which briefly and interestingly reviews the League of Nations idea in history. Now that Germany has been crushed, this problem is the most pressing one before us for upon such a league's successful formation and operation depends the future peace of the world. Prof. Pollard says that "No league has yet succeeded because men have hitherto built their states and churches on their differences from other men." Instead of a balance of power we must have a community of power.

Every conqueror, no matter how warlike, has professed world peace to be his ultimate object, says the writer. He then discusses the early attempts, those of Alexander the Great and of Rome, and the religious wars which were closed in 1648 with the Peace of Westphalia. "The ink was hardly dry on that treaty when the two protestant republics, England and Holland, flew at one another's throats over the carrying trade of the world."

The next attempt came with the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, which was followed by the short-lived League of Princes. Next came the anti-monarchical movement stimulated by the American War of Independence and the French Revolution, culminating in Napoleon's military conquests. The writer then proceeds:

But nationality had, since the Middle Ages, acquired a strength which even Napoleon could not destroy. No national State has been permanently crushed by force of arms, save Poland, since the national State was evolved; and the moral of the Napoleonic wars is that peace must depend for its security and its permanence not upon conquest but upon consent between indestructible nations. Europe took some steps towards the realisation of this condition after Napoleon's fall, but the success of its efforts was impaired by discord over the means by which peace was to be enforced and over the articles of the European association. The Restoration was not merely one of peace after the Napoleonic wars but one of legitimist government after the Revolution and the regime of Napoleonic upstarts; and the Congress of Vienna in 1814-15 was distracted by the two diverse aspects of the problem before it. It was a Congress of princes, not of peoples, and most Sovereigns were not unnaturally convinced, after their recent experience, that war was the outcome of revolution, and that peace could be best preserved by providing against insurrection. This line of thought led to the Holy Alliance, which has almost by common consent been confused with the Quadruple Alliance of the four great Powers, Britain, Russia, Prussia and Austria, which overthrew Napoleon and actually kept the peace for some years after his fall.

The Holy Alliance was inspired by the Tsar Alexander, a monarch with a mind almost as nebulous as that of his latest successor. He was not without liberal leanings, he was devoted to mystical piety, and even talked of the sacred rights of humanity. But he could not help being an autocrat even though he regarded himself as merely a vicar of God, the only Sovereign of the world. On September 26, 1815, he persuaded his Prussian and Austrian colleagues to sign with him the Act of the Holy Alliance, in which they spoke of their peoples as being branches of one Christian nation, announced their conviction that States no less than individuals were bound by the precepts of Christianity, promised to regulate thereby their domestic and foreign policy, and undertook to render each other assistance in every case and in every place. It was to be a universal union of Christian fathers of national families, and George IV and the Pope were the only Christian princes who did not subscribe. But the Holy Alliance effected nothing. It held no Congresses, passed no executive measures, developed no machinery, and left the practical work of maintaining peace to the Quadruple Alliance.

This was a businesslike combination more to the taste of Castlereagh and the British Government. It was formulated at Chaumont, in March 1814, by Great Britain, Russia, Prussia and Austria, and was confirmed with additions and modifications at various times until it received its final shape at the Second Treaty of Paris on November 20, 1815. The four Great Powers bound themselves not by a vague confession of legitimist faith, but by specific agreements, and arranged to meet at periodic congresses to transact their business. At the first of these Congresses, held at Aix-la-Chapelle in 1818, France was admitted to the circle and the Quadruple became the Quintuple Alliance. Castlereagh was enthusiastic over its prospects; he hailed the system of periodic congresses as 'a new discovery' in the art of government, 'at once extinguishing the cobwebs with which diplomacy obscures the horizon, bringing the whole bearing of the system into its true light, and giving to the counsels of the Great Powers the efficiency and almost the simplicity of a single State.'

But the single State was not so simple as he thought. It depended for its continuance upon a common will, and that common will could only be found in a compromise between the reaction of Metternich and the comparative liberalism of Castlereagh. The Tsar held the balance, and it was upset when a series of more or less revolutionary manifestations in Germany and elsewhere, followed by a mutiny of his own Guards in 1820, perverted Alexander to the reactionary cause and threw him into the arms of Metternich. A schism among the Great Powers appeared at the Congress of Troppau in 1820 and was widened at that of Verona in 1823. France developed a disinclination to see reaction re-established in Italy by Austrian arms, and Great Britain to seeing it re-established in Spain (and still more in the Spanish American Colonies) by French arms. On that question Canning broke away from the Quintuple Alliance and sought the support of President Monroe; and a New World was called in to redress the balance of the Old. The French Revolution of 1830 finally severed France from the cause of reaction, and the Quintuple Alliance was thus reduced to a Triple Alliance of the three autocrats of Russia, Prussia and Austria, who had signed the original Holy Alliance. This tended to create and perpetuate the confusion between the two Alliances, and to saddle British statesmen like Castlereagh, who made the Quadruple Alliance, with the odium of reaction attaching to the Holy Alliance which they refused to join.

Shorn of the Liberal elements in their coalition, the three autocracies continued to repress reform and thus to provoke revolution until the general conflagration of 1848. Their conduct made the confederation of Europe a byword, and nationalism enlisted under Canning's standard of 'Every nation for itself, and God for us all.' Governments had to purge themselves of autocracy before the nations would favor their combination; peoples might combine themselves, but they had no love for a combination of masters.

It was, however, no easy thing for democracies to combine. We have seen that the destruction of autocracy in Russia does not produce popular unanimity even within a single State; still less has the reduction of Turkey in Europe conduced to harmony among the Balkan peoples. Autocracy was restored again in Austria after 1848 because its various races fought one another instead of combining against their common master, and it recovered in Germany because the German tribes could not unite on a basis of Parliamentary self-government.

Such efforts as were made in the latter half of the nineteenth century to internationalise Europe were due to sectional impulse. There was the attempt of governments and diplomatists, without much popular backing, to create and maintain a Concert of Europe; there was the middle-class and commercial movement towards Free Trade; and there was the International Socialist tendency which was directed not so much against war as against capitalism. The only political system which approached the idea of a League of Nations was the British Empire, and it achieved success, not by the amalgamation of independent units, but by their decentralisation; a like solution may emerge from the turmoil in Russia and in the Hapsburg dominions, and possibly Scandinavia, through the separation of Norway and Sweden, may have obtained a somewhat similar international understanding.

It is clear that a League of Nations cannot be based on the German idea of the State. The State, according to Treitschke, is might, and has 'the right to merge into one the nationalities contained within itself.' It is not by the repression, but only by the expression, of nationality that a League of Nations can be formed; for nationality has come to stay, and the purport of a League of Nations is to provide means for the expression of nationality in any form but war. Youthful exuberence tends to express itself in combat, but in maintaining peace we direct the vigor of men into more fruitful channels than mutual destruction. The national State is built on that foundation; but so far we have failed in the international sphere, and war has perverted colossal energies from constructive to destructive purposes. The failure in the nineteenth century was largely due to a perversion of the Balance of Power. To Castlereagh and his colleagues that phrase meant the 'just repartition of force amongst the States of Europe,' a sort of rationing of power by agreement; it has come to mean a balance between two groups of Allies, or in other words between two parties which, in the absence of a controlling common will or super-State, involves a permanent race for armaments breaking out into recurrent civil war.

The Triple Alliance was one League of Nations, the Entente was another; and the present conflict proves their futility as Leagues of Peace, for if it takes two to make a quarrel, it takes two to keep the peace, and no League of Nations can keep the peace if there is another bent on war. The Concert of Europe broke down like the Quintuple Alliance because of the lack of a common will.

To the organisation of that common will many efforts in recent times have been directed. It will not come through the conquest of others unless we also conquer ourselves. The British Empire is an example because England conquered its will to dominate its Dominions; but while an example, it is not an alternative, to the League of Nations, and it would cease to be even an example if it were used to dominate others. An even better example is the peace we have had for a century on the frontier of the United States and Canada without any cost in life, limb, or treasure, because the two peoples had conquered their aggressive impulse, and left that frontier undefended except by moral restraint. Peace by forbearance can, however, only be made between those who consent to forbear, and constraint by force is the only remedy for those who cannot or will not restrain themselves.

The League of Nations, if it is to succeed, must be based upon a common will to maintain the peace, and a common readiness to repress the ambitions of those who seek to break it. No League has yet succeeded because men have hitherto built their States and Churches on their difference from other men; and he who would found a League of Nations must base it on their common interest in peace. Instead of a balance, we need a community, of power, with no immunity for any one from its obligations and its responsibilities.

Thoughts On The Present Discontents In China

By H. H. Brayton Barff

III. Reason And Reconstruction

IT has already been pointed out that men do not follow the guidance of reason either in private or in public life. This is the case whether in connection with ordinary matters and occasions or with unusual, special and even critical circumstances. Indeed, in the critical issues, frequently men altogether take leave of rational principles and get into a panic. An apt illustration of how men get impatient of reason was given us a couple of years ago. The most massive intellect in British political life for a century was ousted from its position of leadership to make way for a genius entirely emotional, yet capable of achieving tremendous results because gifted with the capacity for defying reason and manipulating prejudice, good or bad as the occasion might require, for the ends it had in view. It is said that the Germans feared the advent of Mr. Lloyd George, and this is quite believable, for they have themselves learned the supreme lesson of trusting not reason but passion, emotion and prejudice. The spread of Kaiser-worship and its allied cults is a fine example of how the negation of reason can be made to serve certain definite ends. The whole career of Beaconsfield, from the time of his gorgeous waistcoats, which many thought ought to be straitwaistcoats, was a running commentary on the text that man does not live by reason alone. The philosophical radicals accomplished but little. Mill in Parliament and Bentham out of it were almost negligible quantities; but Beaconsfield stole their ideas, clothed them in emotional language, gave them a picturesqueness entirely dissociated from anything rational, and passed them into laws in spite of their rationality. The comparative failure of Gladstone's career may be traced to the fact that he compromised between reason and instinct, between rationalism and emotion, or between unclouded vision and the insistent demands of the moment. He and his party were driven for twenty years into the wilderness because of the triumph of Randolph Churchill, Arthur Balfour, John Gorst and Drummond Wolff, who preached a doctrine the very name of which, a violent contradiction in terms, proclaimed its utter divorce from reason —Tory Democracy.

The success of British rule in India is not based upon any appeal to reason in the system itself but upon the practical common sense of those responsible for its administration. The most rationally devised part of the whole, the educational system, has been its least successful part.

Nor are thing very different in China. This disability to follow the dictates of reason takes a different form, determined by difference in race psychology, but it is an universal human trait, and it reveals itself in countless ways. Nothing could be more coldly reasonable than the generality of the judgments delivered in the several mixed courts in China, yet a mixed court is the very last place to which Chinese disputants will take their cases. The rational, dispassionate judgment, in accordance with the principles of pure justice, delivered by an impartial, disinterested judge, does not appeal to them. It always leaves dissatisfaction behind it on one side, often on both; and lasting enmity between the litigants often follows. What does appeal is a statement of the two sides of the case before two or three friends who by their very interestedness will reach decisions that may set at defiance the canons of jurisprudence but yet express in rough and ready terms a settlement that leaves no ill-feeling behind, even though it may have involved quite as much expense to both parties as would have been incurred by procedure before a mixed tribunal. Practical common sense, which has nothing in common with the dictates of reason, is preferred to a rational settlement.

A very striking illustration of how the Chinese mind fails to respond to other appeals may be found in the missionary field. In Protestantism it comes with the rational appeal, in Roman Catholicism it comes with the appeal to authority. The success of the Roman Catholic missions in China may be in no small degree attributable to the fact that these missions do not appeal to reason but to other principles—authority, emotion and, using the world in an entirely colorless sense, prejudice.

Bearing these considerations in mind it is not difficult to account for the almost complete futility of the Parliament, now sitting at Canton. That Parliament when it sat in Peking was quite unlike any other Parliament in the world. In no other Parliament has there been so great a preponderance of what may for want of a better word be called intellectuals, that is to say, men who profess to be guided by pure reason alone, but who are therefore unable to make concessions to human weakness and frailty. It is true that this party has shown no conspicuous ability in its own conduct to abide by the dictates of reason, but has been quite as ready as it opponents to resort to the argumentum ad hominem, thereby again demonstrating the insufficiency of reason as a guide for conduct. These intellectuals disdained to look facts in the face, to compound with practical common sense; they had their ideals and they declined to admit that human nature was not plastic enough to be moulded into ideally perfect form. They had their virtues, but their very virtues formed their principal weakness. They would compromise with nothing that did not fit in with their complete, rationally-designed scheme of Chinese political reconstruction. They had in a highly developed degree the chief vices of all doctrinaires the defects of their qualities.

There are of course many reasons for this attitude, but one of these is predominant as a factor, and that is that the great majority of these men had never been in touch with practical administration. They could doubtless frame an ideal constitution for an ideal world, a constitution entirely based upon rational principles; and as a matter of fact that is what they were really trying to do all the time. They were trying to frame a rational constitution for an ideal world of their own making, a world as far removed from reality as the east is from the west. There is a great difference between the products of pure reason and the devices of practical wisdom.

Of practical wisdom these doctrinaires gave no sign and the question arises: What is to be done with them? They have of course their use, their value, their place in the economy of the state; but what is it? Clearly it is not in the legislature. For the practical work of law-making and administration they are constitutionally unfitted. It always appeared very doubtful whether they would ever complete the principal task they had in hand, the framing of the Constitution; and it is equally far from certain that their Constitution when framed would be of practical value.

Whilst they were splitting hairs the country was drifting; whilst they were applying the criticism of pure reason to the practicable proposals of ministers, and declining to look at things from the common-sense point of view, the enemy at the gate stood ready to take every advantage, reasonable or unreasonable; and whilst they continued their apparently interminable academic disputations, the administration of the country was held up for lack of constitutional authority and sanction. It is clear that they must make way for men who will get something done, for men who, though making no claim to intellectualism, have the saving grace of practical capacity. Did we live in a world entirely ruled by reason, or even mainly ruled by reason, China might be able to afford to wait until the ideal Constitution had been evolved, ideal ministers selected, ideal financial measures introduced; but neither the people of China nor the representatives of foreign interests are guided by reason alone and, even if they were, they allowed quite a "reasonable" time for Parliament to show its practical capacity, and made this allowance only to be disappointed.

We are then face to face with this fact, that Parliament as constituted was not likely to achieve anything of practical value, and some means must be found of replacing it as an organ of practical legislation. This raises the question: what is to be done with the intellectuals if from them is to be taken the task hitherto committed to them? The unwieldiness of the body for practical purposes is a problem that is not insoluble, but the immediate problem is to find a task suitable to be assigned to the body now meeting in Canton. The two problems may be solved together. One of the practices obtaining under the Empire suggests what might be done. One of the weaknesses of the Imperial regime was the general acceptance of the view that the scholar, the man of highly developed intellectual power, was fitted for almost any office; but there were two corrective processes at work in the best days of the Empire to prevent this defect having the disastrous consequences it might otherwise have had. Before the days when rank corruption broke down the Chinese system on which the English Civil Service, however imperfectly, was moulded, every man had to win his spurs. His brain-power secured him recognition in the form of an appointment to a minor post; but from that time on his practical performance of his duties was the test by which he was tried. His rise in the official scale was dependent in the main on his practical statesmanship. This practical test was one powerful corrective. The other was the recognition of the fact that after all there were men of intellect who were not capable of holding administrative office successfully. This type of man was drafted in to the Censorate. In other lands the Censorate does not exist as an official institution, but is an unofficial amorphous discreet series of intellectual nuclei. Bernard Shaw, Elbert Hubbard, Maximilian Harden, Tolstoy, Kropotkin and, be it admitted with a recognition of the eternal unfitness of things, Horatio Bottomley, are or have been amongst these nuclei. In China such men as these, in the best days of the Empire, would have been made censors.

The old Censorate suggests the use that may be made of the intellectuals today. The Parliament now meeting would be far too large a body to be maintained in Peking as a sort of permanent critical opposition; and no small part of the administration of the country is carried on in the provinces. It is hardly likely that the old device of setting one provincial official to check and spy upon another will or can be profitably revived. The Canton body is, however, provincial in its basis of election and composition, and if one quarter of its were to be retained in Peking as a national Censorate and the other three-quarters sent to the provinces, each man to the province he represents, there to function as provincial censors, the services of every member would be retained to the country and utilised in the manner best suited to detached intellectualism. One advantage of this plan would be that it would afford free scope for Chinese innate individualism. Each censor acts for himself; the old Censorate seldom acted as a body, and the precedent should be maintained. In very grave cases of dereliction of duty by public officials there would probably be an unanimous Censorate, provincial or national as the case might be; but individual rather than collective activity would be the more usual method of functioning. Incidentally, it may be noted, the expenses of the national Censorate would fall upon the national exchequer whilst those of the provincial Censorates would be a provincial charge. This scheme would have many advantages from the point of view of the provinces, for they would have a local censorate watching the conduct of local officials, and at the same time keeping an eye on the delegate-censors in Peking, to see that they were kept up to the mark. The function of criticism would occupy all the energies of the censors, and the legislative functions now assigned to them as parliamentarians would revert to the highest officials of the state, who might be expected to carry them out on lines that would be at once practicable, just, potentially capable of adaptation to changing conditions, and such as would commend them to the people.

On The Heights

The Redeeming Promise Of The Close Of War

By Clay MacCauley
(Japan Advertiser)

"Out of the lowest depths there is a path to the loftiest heights," wrote Thomas Carlyle, happily phrasing a sublime faith. It may be the tragic fact that the way of deliverance at times lies hidden from longing eyes, but this path is nevertheless somewhere, we are assured; and there is but need that some one come who is discerning enough to find it and inspiring enough to lead in the ascent to safety and repose.

This was the reflection with which I read this morning the address that President Wilson has made to the American Congress in presenting to it the terms of the armistice just agreed to between the Allies and Germany. As I receive it, this address is one of the most far-seeing, essentially good, sublimely prophetic and beneficently momentous state papers ever offered to a great legislature. It fittingly appears at the cessation of the mightiest mortal struggle that ever brought human kind into mutual conflict; at a time when implacable hostility would naturally direct their relations. It is animated by the deepest sympathy with all, friend and foe, who are suffering from the cruelties and terrors of the awful war; and it heralds with confidence a new age for all mankind, an era that is to be shaped by national and international justice and guides safely in the ways of a prosperous peace.

"I am confident" says this prescient guide of the peoples, war tortured for the past four years, "that the nations that have learned the discipline of freedom,——are now about to make a conquest of the world by the sheer power of friendly helpfulness. The present belongs to the peoples who preserve their self-control; the future to those who prove themselves true friends of mankind. To conquer with arms is to make a temporary conquest; to conquer the world by earning its esteem is a conquest that is permanent."

"The objects of the war of armed Imperialism, of the men who were but yesterday the masters of Germany, are at an end, their evil ambitions engulfed in disaster." "The arbitrary power which could secretly disturb the peace of the world is destroyed. The great Unions which destroyed it have now definitely united to set up a peace that will satisfy longings for disinterested justice, based upon something better and more lasting than themselves or the selfish computing interests of powerful states." And there is "no longer conjecture as to the objects of the victors. They will protect the weak, accord their just right to the strong." And more than this "they will immediately do everything possible to supply the needy peoples of Central Europe with food and relieve their other distressing want, thereby setting their minds and energy in line for the great tasks of political reconstruction now facing them."

Was ever a war in human history brought to a close with such redeeming and benevolent promise and pledge? Every true lover of peace, every one who has any sense of the common origin and destiny of humanity regarded as his own kindred, must feel that in these words, coming from the chief executive of a nation that is now at the front along with kindred great powers, a new era for humanity has been heralded, and that we are all summoned to order ourselves as helpers in realising the sublime idealism which the closing world struggle has induced this world leader to proclaim. May we fervently pray that the Allied Powers shall long keep the heights they have just been made competent to gain.

An Elder Statesman

What a lifetime has been that of Lord Halsbury, now in his ninety-fourth year, with vigor of mind and body apparently unimpaired! It covers the whole of three reigns and parts of two others, and the ex-Lord Chancellor has seen the emancipation of Jews and Roman Catholics, the reform of Parliament, the whole active careers of Gladstone and Beaconsfield, the introduction of the locomotive, the entire revolution of judicial procedure. He was a year old when Carlyle married, 12 when Swinburne was born, eight when Browning published his first poem, 25 when Tennyson was made Poet Laureate. He made his first journeys in stage coaches, and now he can go in an aeroplane.

Bolshevism and Music

A German musician who has been in Russia for three years or more has just returned home and told the readers of a Berlin paper how Bolshevism affects the arts. According to him—and his name guarantees all he says—music and the drama flourish exceedingly. Prices of admission have gone up everywhere, but none the less every theater and concert hall is packed. The expensive seats are filled by working men and soldiers: what used to be called "the better classes" are in the cheaper places.

In response to a demand for a war bonus the Government allotted to the staff of the Moscow Conservatoire (now called, by the way, "The People's Palace of Music") a sum of £20,000 on condition that it should be divided equally. The instruction was carried out to the letter, and the charwomen got exactly as much as the Director.

KOBE RIOTERS GUILTY

Out Of 600 Arrests 165 Will Receive Sentence

Kobe which has suffered most during the recent rice riots has naturally a larger number of arrests than any other city in Japan. Damages of more than Y.3,000,000 were inflicted on buildings and houses, and several citizens were seriously injured during the disturbances. Among nearly six hundred citizens who were arrested no less than 165 citizens have been found guilty in the courts and await sentence.

Song Of The Freemen

Brothers, by the blood and toil
That did erst the despot foil,
And did consecrate this soil
To the freeman's hand;

By the names that we revere,
By their scorn of pain and fear,
'Neath their unbowed manner, here
We unfettered stand.

May thy clustered stars e'er lend
To our eyes an upward trend;

"Please send me another of your pipes. It is of great service on my motor bike, as there is no fear of the ashes going in your eyes."

NO hot ashes can be blown into your eyes when Motoring, or when sitting under a Punkah or Electric Fan. It insists on giving you REAL PIPE JOY on all occasions. The "reefed-in" top guarantees it.

The Wyse Pipe Burns from the bottom upwards, yet it has the appearance of a high class pipe. Page 2 of booklet explains why the ASHES DO NOT DROP OUT.

Hongkong Share Market

Hongkong, November 22.—Messrs. Moxon and Taylor write as follows in their weekly report:

Our market is characterised by a buoyant feeling and the volume of business put through has been on a generous scale. Following the armistice news practically all our stocks firmed up and buying rates have been the order of the day since.

Shanghai has done practically no business since the armistice was declared and at the time of writing, news has reached the Colony that the Stock Exchange there is closed until Monday.

Banks.—Hongkong Banks have been dealt with as high as $760 for cash but at the close the market is slightly weaker with shares offering at $755.

Marine Insurances.—Cantons have been dealt at $385 closing with further buyers at the rate. Unions have advanced to $965 at which a small business has been done. North Chinas have buyers at Tls. 126½.

Fire Insurances.—China Fires could be placed at $160 and Hongkong Fires at $340.

Shipping.—Douglases have again advanced and as high as 794½ has been done for cash. Steamboats have buyers at $23 after business at the rate. Preferred Indos are wanted at $39 and Deferred Indos have been largely dealt in at $161½ for December and $158 for cash closing with buyers at the latter rate for cash. Shells have been done at 130/- and 125/- closing with buyers at the latter rate. Star Ferries are wanted at $37, the market being bare of stock.

Refineries.—China Sugars have had a sharp rise to $95 for November, $96 for December and $101 was done for March, market closing firm at these rates. Malabons are in request at $38.

Oils and Mining.—Raubs at $2⅛, Urals at 35/-, and Kailans at 47/- are all quiet with nothing doing. Langkats have been dealt at Tls. 20½ for December closing with buyers at the rate.

Docks, Wharves and Godowns.—Kowloon Wharves have been the medium of a fair business at $101 for cash and $105 for January and at the close buyers predominate at these rates. Hongkong Docks have been dealt in at $163 for cash, market closing steady at this quotation. Shanghai Docks have buyers in the North but owing to the Stock Exchange these being closed a very small business has been done, the rate being nominal Tls. 147 for December.

Lands, Hotels and Buildings.—Centrals could be placed at $100. Hotels are wanted at $90 and Lands at $97, the latter having been done to a fair extent. Humphreys have been largely dealt at $7¼. Kowloon Lands at $32 and West Points at $73 have buyers.

Cotton Mills.—The following are nominal quotations: Ewos Tls. 205; Shanghai Cottons Tls. 142; Kungyiks Tls. 16; Yangtszepoos Tls. 8¼; Orentals Tls. 61.

Electric Companies. — Hongkong Electrics have buyers at $63. China Lights have come to business at $7, and Hongkong Trams are wanted at $7.30.

Miscellaneous.—China Borneos could be placed at $12, Dairy Frams at $27½. Ropes at $31½. Providents at $73¼, and Cements at $8.90. Powells are a quiet market at $9½ and Waterboats have changed hands at $12.

Exchange.—The Demand rate on London is 3/3⅞ and the T.T. selling rate on Shanghai is 63.

SOUTH MANCHURIA RAILWAY

Important Section in the Overland Route between the Far East and Europe.

Operating all Lines in South Manchuria and Chosen east of Mukden

Travellers and Tourists journeying between Tokyo and Peking should travel via the South Manchuria Railway, which runs from Fusan to Mukden and passes through magnificent scenery and furnishes the last link in the new st highway round the world. Only a short sea passage (about 10 hours), between Shimonoseki and Fusan. The ordinary daily trains between Fusan and Mukden have sleeping and dining accommodation.

This line connects at Mukden (the ancient capital of China) with the Peking-Mukden Line and the main line of the South Manchuria Railway, which connects the Trans-Siberian Route with the seaboard at Dairen, where there are several regular steamer services.

Owing to the suspension of the Express Train Service between Europe and the Orient, with no immediate prospect of its resumption, all the Express Trains have been discontinued until further notice.

Particulars and guide books free from the International Sleeping Car Co.'s Offices, Messrs. Thos. Cook and Son's Offices, the Japan Tourist Bureau Offices, or direct from the
